HOW DO OTHERS SEE THE AMERICANS

A Many people who first come to the USA say that Americans are open, friendly and easy-going, but after living in the country for a while, they change their minds. One foreign student explained that when he first came, people helped him get settled, took him shopping, invited him for dinner, and called to see how he was. After two or three weeks, however, they stopped doing these things, and he was confused and disappointed.

B The thing is Americans try to do what is necessary to help people when they first arrive. They do many things to help these people get settled and often make the new arrivals feel like a part of the family. Newcomers expect this new hospitality to continue in the form of a solid friendship. However Americans expect that once people are settled and have been there for a few weeks, they will begin to do things for themselves and become independent.

C In the United States time is exact. People plan activities and arrange their lives around specific time. For example in the United States, one should always arrive on time for dinner, a date, or a business appointment. If other people are expected for dinner or for a meeting and you are late, everyone else will have to wait until you arrive to begin.

D Americans are fond of greeting cards. They are printed not only for birthdays and anniversaries, Christmas but also for graduation, Valentine's Day, and many other events. Some business people send cards to clients to maintain good-will.

1. How do Americans treat newcomers?

A They never help them.	C They become friends forever.

1. Automation is the use of control systems in concern with other applications of information technology to control industrial machinery and processes, reducing the need for human intervention. In the scope of industrialization, automation is a step beyond mechanization.
2. Automation plays an increasingly important role in the world economy and in daily experience. Engineers strive to combine automated devices with mathematical and organizational tools to create complex systems for a rapidly expanding range of applications and human activities.
3. Many roles for humans in industrial processes presently lie beyond the scope of automation. Tasks requiring subjective assessment or synthesis of complex sensory data, such as scents and sounds, as well as high-level tasks such as strategic planning, currently require human expertise. In many cases, the use of humans is more cost-effective than mechanical approaches even where automation of industrial tasks is possible.

- / 1. ,
- People can rely on automation in all industrial processes.
 - Automation concerns only industrial processes.
 - Automation is not a universal substitute of human's role in industrial processes.
 - The task of automation is to reduce the need for humans as it is too cost-effective.

- / 2. .
- it intensifies their work greatly
 - it facilitates their daily life and work
 - it provides them with additional workplaces
 - in some cases they can't do without it

- / 3. . :
- How does automation benefit to people?
- Automation promotes further humans' development.
 - Automation controls industrial machinery and processes, reducing the need for human intervention.
 - Automation excludes people's role in industrial processes.
 - People rely on it as their work is more cost-effective.

- / 4. .
- Automation has its advancements as well as shortcomings concerning the way of its application.
 - Automation is the only way of advancement people's work and life.
 - In spite of playing a great role in industry, world economy and people's daily activities, automation can't entirely substitute people.
 - People rely on automation in controlling industrial processes, world economic growth.
